Breaks Defenses

In Norway, meanwhile, a German force broke through Norwegdefenses between Moss, 35 miles south of Oslo, and Holen, 10 miles closer to the capital. Since the Germans were advancing toward Oslo they were presumed to be newly-landed troops pushing up the shore of Oslo fjord to join the invaders' expeditionary army.

German advance caught the Norwegians by surprise and they had no time to meet it.

Defense troops, holding posi-tions along the narrow fjord, had established a semi-circular line from Moss to Holen, east to Mysen, northward, east of the River Glommen and Lake Oieren to Romerike, thence southward to Tyri fjord and Vikesund, which is about 30 miles west of Oslo. Fortifications were being hrown up in the valleys to the northwest to bolster the ring. The German advance from Moss was said to have been accom-plished in commandeered buses and automobiles and to have been impeded, at least briefly, when a bridge was dynamited as the first Refugees from the Holen region

The Germans, however, were reported harassed within Oslo when Norwegians blew up a large dam at nearby Solbergsfors and cut off the city's electricity.

Norwegian sources said telephone and telegraph lines linking Oslo and Berlin also had been put out of commission.

The newspaper's correspondent said the king told him in a highway meeting, "I have not been out of my boots and I have hardly had a wink" since leaving Oslo

He reported, however, that King Haakon still was in good spirits and determined to stay in his country "as long as one inch remains Norwegian."

One of the ministers accompanying the king told of a close escape yesterday when, he said, four German bombs exploded near where the monarch had thrown where the monarch had thrown himself into the snow. New Recruiting Drive for Mexican Coup Is Underway, He Says

Washington, April 13 (A)-Rep. Dies (D.-Texas) said today he had information that Russia and Germany were plotting to bring on a revolution in Mexico and set up a puppet government on the door-step of the United States. The House investigator told newsmen that Communist Russia, was keeping alive, for use in a Mexican upheaval, "the same organizations" which functioned in the Spanish civil war. This information, the Texan declared, constituted one of the reasons why his committee on un-American activities was questioning Veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Bridge, an organization of Americans who fought for the Barcelona government in Spain.

Dies said that 5,000 to 6,000 Americans were recruited by Communists for the brigade and that a military force of similar "might turn the decision" in Mexico. He was informed, he added, that Communist organizations in the United States were prepared to begin a new recruiting drive for a Mexican coup. The committee head said that his informants included "elective officials" in Mexico and "one or two United States senators," all of whose names he withheld. Among the things they told him. he declared, was that 10,000 Com-

Other witnesses told of executions and brutality against Americans in the brigade. William C. McCuistion of Frederick, Md. said he saw "DeMaio kill two men" in a Barcelona cafe.

McCuistion later amended this statement, saying one of the two died on the spot and the other was moved to a hospital, where he presumed he died. The man who died instantly, McCuistion said, was an American named Mathews and the other was a Canadian named Moran. Both were "stragglers" from the army, he added, and DeMaio was engaged in rounding up deserters. DeMaio denied before the com-

This now is the gunpowder which still flashes its fury in the wars abroad and which literally has represented the powers of men against men from the 16th century down through the ages.
Its official origin dates back to the time of Roger Bacon (1214 to 1294) and to him and a German monk named Schwartz (about 1320) has been ascribed its invention. Before this time, howeyer, mixtures of a nature similar to gunpowder were known in China and India from remote times and were especially used for rockets. Gunpowder and guns, however, have been a constructive factor in the advancement of civilization since they first came into extensive use, and in the collection of implements at the home of Martin Retting at Shokan is repre-sented guns used by the pioneer builders of this nation, and others carried by the hands of men at

Uses Mailing List

Mr. Retting, who is not a collector, makes guns and sinflar implements his business, and through a mailing list he does business with customers in various parts of the nation.

In the large attic of his home, which he recently purchased, are arranged collections of all types of guns, pistols, swords, spear-heads and other weapons of savage tribes

Guns and gun parts owned by Mr. Retting date back to the earliest practical use of firearms and among his choice pieces is a gun-lock of the type invented by Leonardo DiVinci in 1490 and which came into general use in

This fascinating, but complicated device, had a spring lock which was wound up by a wrench on one side and a revolving unit which created friction after the springlock was released. In the hammer was pyrite against which the revolving wheel pressed to ignite the powder.

American Types

In the gun collection also are muskets which projected from the portholes and windows of colonial homes in this region to fight off the Indians. There are guns carried by the Pilgrims and other early Colonial settlers; types used in the French and Indian and Revolutionary wars; the War of 1812, the Civil War and those of the various models now in use.

An almost unlimited collection of pistols includes the types car-ried by the men of colonial America and its formative days as the United States. There are pistols used by the men of the shooting days of the pioneer west and by the desperadoes of that

Mr. Retting can show guns carried by Arabs in the desert, others which were invented and used for years in ancient India. He has also the vicious inventions of the savage tribes including the tribes of the Philippines and spearheads from the South American Amazonian tribes

Gives Full History

Included in this vast collection are guns and pistols of every known type used in America and for each Mr. Retting is able to recite a full history as though he had learned it only yesterday.

One of the longest guns of his collection is a musket of a type used in the French and Indian war and the Revolution. made in 1750 and found its way to this continent just prior to the struggle of the colonies for their independence.

Contrasted to this is the shorter English carbine which was used in 1812. Others of the long-barrel type are the old Kentucky sporting rifles and shotguns and a type used by the rangers of the nation in the pioneering days

All Had Flint Locks

All of these earlier guns used in America were of the flint-lock type. This meant that they were discharged through a spark caused by the friction of a piece of metal against flint at a point where a small bit of powder on the cap sent its fire through a small hole known as the touch-hole and ignited the charge inside the gun.

Much to Learn

'Choose Your Weapon' Might Well Be the Slogan Here

Enough firearms and weapons of all types are in this collection shown above to supply an army and Ulster county today would never have to worry about an attack from the Indians. It would be one of the most unusual armies of the world, however, since the guns and weapons would represent about every type in use for five or six At top left in a layout of guns which figured in every phase of American history. Most of the longer types are the older, but the short one at the bottom was produced in 1812, indicating that there was some thought, even in the early days of cutting down the size. At top right is a view of a variety of pistols, all of which were used at different times in the history of this country. This collection includes everything from the more dainty Derringer to the husky horse pistol which was used at one time in the bold days of the west. Shown at center is Martin Retting, who made this amazing collection, and his wife. They are standing near the gun racks which contain only a part of the guns on hand. Mr. Retting is holding a Nazi dagger and a type of the more modern rifle. Mrs. Retting is holding two of the older models, both of which are taller than herself. The inset shows a type of gun-lock invented by Leonardo DaVinci. The view at lower left is one of part of the sword collection and in the foreground is a type of metal headdress and armor worn in the days of Captain John Smith with the swords of that day in front. At lower right are just a few of the daggers, battle axes and spearheads in the Retting collection. At the top is part of a cane, the head of which carried a dagger and sixshooter as shown to the right just under the end of the cane at the top. Also at the top, to the left, is a battle axe and still on the left are types of daggers used by savage tribes in the Philippines.

More Modern Pieces

The collection includes trench knives of the type used in the World War and among them is the German saw-tooth blade, which was first intended for use by the engineers, but which subsequently found its way into use during battle.

The sword and dagger collection is not considered as valuable as that of the guns, Mr. Retting explained, because the genuine types of swords are so valuable that it is almost impossible for a collector or dealer to buy large collector or dealer to buy large collections of them.

All swords in the collection, however, are authentic reproduc-tions of the original types and many of them perhaps have played a part in conflicts of earlier days. Such guns as the Miguelet musket, a flint-lock type which came into use by the Arabs as early as 1650, is still in use there and other similar types are used today in Each piece of this vast collection has a history as an implement with which its owner is familiar, and the guns particularly represent an almost complete history of firearms. But as Mr. Retting explains, there is much more work to be done, and much more to learn about this subject, which has been so important for cen-turies to all nations of the world.

WAS WAR EVER CIVILIZED?

"The Civil War," says an editorial in the Chicago Daily News, "was the last of the great conflicts that was 'civilized war'." In that war there were exchanges of prisoners. Truces were granted to bury the dead. There were hundreds of cases of official and unofficial preservation of normal amenities. Northern commanders had great admiration for General Lee, and there were many in the south who appreciated Abraham Lincoln.

It may be questioned, however, whether any war could be "civilized" so long as war means settling disputes by killing human beings, destroying property, concentrating national thought and resources on destruction, and stirring fear, hatred and cruelty.

Many wars, including that now raging in Europe, have seemed at the time to be unavoidable. They represented, nevertheless, the failure of statesmen and governments to find a better solution of their differences and the failure of citizens to translate their longing for peace into constructive cooperation.

Succeeding wars seem to grow less and less "civilized" and create conditions which breed further wars. Is that dreadful cycle ever going to be stopped? Will it always be necessary for civilization to fight for its life by uncivilized means?

COMMUNISM, OLD AND NEW

One of the strange things about Communism, in this present-day world, is its cruelty and apparent appetite for dislike and hatred. The typical Communist individual or group, even while seeking converts, seems to act deliberately in such a way as to invite the dislike and enmity of normal men and women.

Perhaps this malevolent streak is beneficial, everything considered, because by alienating normal people it keeps them from joining its ranks, where they are free to choose. The matter is mentioned here merely as an unexpected freak of human nature in the realm of current ideologies. The normal thing is for propagandists of any sort to seek converts by exhibiting the more friendly, courteous and pleasant phases of human nature instead of its ugly sides.

The contrast is especially strong when we think of the Communist groups we used to have in this country before the days of Marx, Lenin and Stalin. We called them "Communities" then, the same name in a slightly different form. There were the famous Brook Farm Community, the Oneida Community, Quaker Communities and many others, and some of the most famous literary men of the last century belonged to them.

They lived a community life and owned things in common, and worked in common, but there the resemblance ends. They had no dictators. They preached and practiced love, not hate. They opposed war and violence of all kinds. They aimed to perfect human nature. To them the cruelties and excesses of Russian Communism would have been incredible.

FAMILY DEMOCRACY

Here's a sociologist who says that father no longer rules the family, but that democracy is now practised in the home. Fifty years ago, says Dr. Edmund Brunner of Columbia University, paternal dictatorship was the rule. Exceptions may have existed, but they were too few to count.

It is interesting to have Dr. Brunner suggest that the dictatorship has not merely shifted from father to mother. Many less scientific observers believe that to be the case. Some of them, in fact, maintain that mother always was the boss, although she used to wield her power indirectly and with some degree of camouflage.

Probably the sociologist is more nearly right than facetious critics of the domestic scene admit. There certainly is more democracy in the home so far as children are concerned. They have a voice in most plans and procedures and, according to some observers who disapprove, any vestiges of dictatorship that persist are really exercised by them.

THE METAL ROUND-UP

In Italy, we are told, property owners have been ordered to tear down and turn over to the government all iron grilles. An effort to SPRING CHILLS AND FEVER get this done voluntarily was not successful; hence the decree which can be enforced. Metal lamp posts and supports for power lines are expected to go next, writes Signor Gayda, for the "better purpose of being transformed into arms and instruments of la-

Germany, too, is collecting metal. There has been no gold in circulation there since the World War. Silver coins were withdrawn in 1934. Now the government calls in all coins containing nickel and copper. The nickel coins will be replaced by aluminum, the copper ones by paper.

To set a good example to the nation in this metal collection, Adolf Hitler is reported to have ordered down the bronze doors of the Chancellory. These fine doors have been one of the sights of Berlin. Now their artistic value must be disregarded. Metal has supposedly more important uses in war-making

WOMEN HEARD FROM

Women were rather slow getting into politics after they got the vote, but they are making up for it. This year's campaign will doubtless make a record, as regards feminine participation.

It started with the special election of Frances P. Bolton, in Ohio, to succeed her husband after his death. Now there is further progress in Ohio along this line, as Mrs. Robert A. Taft, an excellent campaigner, takes the stump along with her husband to help him win the presidential nomination. Many women are running for local, state and federal offices in various states.

It would contribute greatly to the interest of the presidential contest if Mrs. Thomas E. Dewey would follow Mrs. Taft's example. But Mr. Dewey so far persists in his announced determination to "do all the talking for his family in politics." Brilliant as he is, the young district attorney might make a mistake there.

A Berlin correspondent says "Denmark met the invasion with disciplined non-resistance." Well, there's one thing the neutrals are learning, anyway.

The Nazis say they have proved that America caused the war; so with that vexing question settled, we can go about our business as usual.

Once more the Allies must face the job of locking the stable door after the horse is

DIET IN ARTHRITIS

In former years rheumatism (arthritis, pains in the joints) was just one of those things that come to some individuals. Because the earliest specimens of bones found showed irritation of the joint ends of the bones, rheumatism is often called the oldest disease of man.

When it was found that infection of teeth and tonsils was a cause of rheumatism, nearly all cases were blamed on these two organs for a time and useful teeth and tonsils, under the very slightest suspicion, were removed. More good than harm was done by this "wholesale" method but fortunately today physicians, dentists, and throat specialists consult one another before teeth and tonsils are removed to relieve arthritis.

One of the more recent advances in the treatment of arthritis is by diet. Drs. A. A. Fletcher, Toronto, and Ralph Pemberton, Phila., were able to show that cutting down on starch food-sugar, pastry, bread, potatoes-would give relief from the pain and crippling of arthritis.

During the past five years other "arthritic" spe cialists have been doing research work on the effects of diet. They also advise cutting down on starch foods, cutting down to some extent on proteins,-meat, eggs, fish, cereals-but greatly in-creasing the amount of vegetables and fruits. Underlying this fruit and vegetable diet is the idea that the colon-large intestine-is to blame for much of the pain and crippling of arthritis, and the fruits and vegetables not only stimulate the bowel movement but also "wash out" the wastes from the Many patients, when pain disappears, go back to the full diet and their pain promptly returns. This means that the fruit and vegetable diet should be continued for weeks and months, perhaps always, if they are to remain free of pain.

Besides reducing weight, this fruit and vegetable 'diet may be "weakening" and the individual must rest more, or have occasional meat, eggs, or fish days, to maintain his strength. Regular bowel action of large stools is one of the gratifying results

YESTERDAY: Because Brenda is a Burnham, Judge Harper comes to her with a neighborhood problem. Alaine and Abner, the Abernathy twins, have quarreled again and Alaine is planning to elope. Judge Harper wants Brenda's help.

Chapter Nine

Brenda Butts In

In THE living room of the Abernathy house a dark young man rose to greet them, his white teeth flashing in a smile.

"I think I'm going to pull it off this time, Judge, in spite of you!" "I've brought reinforcements," said the Judge coolly. "Brenda, I wave."
won't stop to present the enemy to you. You'll find Alaine's room me tell y at the right, in front. Go right up, will you, my dear?"

Brenda was divided between laughter and embarrassment as she ran up the stairs. Alaine Abernathy, she judged, was not yet twenty; a mere girl, and yet she was the mistress of her own house; the house into which a stranger was forcing her way. She rapped gently at a half open door. Alaine called:

"If it's you, Miss Ormond, you might as well go downstairs again. I've made up my mind this time, and nobody can stop me."

Brenda walked in. The pretty room looked as if a cyclone had recently had its way with it. Clothes were strewn on chairs tionery onto the floor. And in the midst of the confusion stood Alaine, her dark hair ruffled about her head, her brown eyes gleaming with anger. She was evidently in the act of dressing, for she wore only a silk slip and her away. stockings.

Brenda said casually: "Your lip rouge isn't on straight. Your mouth is one-sided."
Startled, the girl glanced into the mirror, repaired the damage carelessly. Then she turned on her visitor.

"You're Miss Burnham, aren't you? May I ask ——"

"What I'm doing here? Trying to keep you from making a fool of yourself, darling!"

The brown ever blazed "I see

Brenda coolly removed a pile of underthings from a chair and seated herself.

"Oh. you're far from being packed. I should think it would take you at least an hour, judging by the way this room looks. While you're about it, suppose you tell me about this man you call your husband-to-be?"

Alaine inquired reasonably:
"Why? Why should I? What business is it of yours?'

"Put it down to natural curi-"We've got to talk about some thing; it might as well be Mr. Barton. That's his name?"

The little ruse worked. Alaine said sulkily: "No, Barrow, Edward Barrow, but everybody calls him Ned. He's really swell, Brenda! If you think you know have another row! Brenda! If you think you know "But my dear N me well enough to come up here like this, surely I know you well enough to call you by your first name!) I've treated him like a yellow dog, whistling him on and driving him off. But this time he's not going to be driven off. I sent for him, and I'm going to marry him. At the City Hall. Just as soon as I get my things packed. Damn these shoes!"

"Put 'em heel to toe-not both high heels together," Brenda advised. "You shouldn't be putting those shoes in with that chiffon dress anyway. Take 'em out and put 'em in the other bag."

Too Much Bossing

ALAINE obeyed without ques-"Now why," Brenda went on in ernathy has no business to say how low my new frock shall be cut! Because I've stood all the ossing from him I'm ever going to! I'll have you know I'm one hour and six minutes older than he is anyway, and if that doesn't give me a right to make decisions about this place I don't know what does! It's a lovely frock, too," she went on, pointing to the crumpled mass from which she had just removed the pair of shoes. "I paid more for it than for any dress I've ever had since I grew up. I showed it to him when it came home, if it comes to that. Was it my fault if he thought the V was in the back instead of the front? And then Alaine even then I met her when this noon when I was trying it on -you know the University dance would have to come marching upstairs and see me!"

ing on the sidewalk, he continued. "I live a couple of blocks back of here, in one of those cas-stairs and see me!"

She paused, necessarily, for breath. Brenda waited and presently Alaine went on with something resembling genuine relish.

My dear, there was the father and mother of a row! I though I knew all the cuss words Ab had at his command but he introduced some really new and interesting ones into his diatribe. . . . That's right, isn't it? Diatribe? Or do I mean dyastole? . . . At any rate. we fought like a pair of Kilkenny cats, and I went down and told Ned if he'd get the license and come for me I'd marry him this afternoon. And I'm going to," she concluded firmly.

Brenda shook her head. The wouldn't today, if I were you. Your hair needs a wave and your hands are awful. What have you been doing to them?

Alaine spread her long fingers out and viewed them disgustedly. "Helping Ab cut back his old peonies on the farm! We've a little country place, you know-or maybe you don't know-and Ab and I are both keen on botany. We use the place to experiment. It's loads of fun. Three years ago we grew some peonies—our own seedlings—and they have to be cut back in the fall. It's death and destruction to one's nails, of course. I intended to get a manicure tomorrow; a manicure and a wave."

"Get it," Brenda advised. "Let me tell your young man that the wedding's postponed until the bride is her usual charming self. You really look like the wrath of God, you know," she continued amicably. "It isn't fair to a hushand to enter into marriage with band to enter into marriage with your hair all straggly and your hands like that. A good facial wouldn't hurt you for once, either; though I don't advise them usually for one so young."

"Who are you to be advising at all?" was the pert question. "A beauty expert?"

"Just another girl—and one with eyes in her head." She rose. "Shall I go down and give Mr.

Barrow the message?"
"Well, but — but I do suppose I'll take all the blame myself—he saw me come dashing upstairs so he knows I intended to rescue—I mean to try to per-suade you to change— I mean to postpone the wedding. Do let me go down now!" And when Alaine still hesitated, she took the girl by the arm and led her to the mirror. One glance at the dark, disheveled hair, the carelessly applied lip rouge, and the drawn ex-pression of the young face settled the matter.

"All right—go down! But you're to tell him its only postponed! Promise?" "I promise," Brenda said, and sedately descended the stairs.

Plants, Like Human Beings, Benefit From Vitamins

By ROBERT E. GEIGER (A) Feature Service Writer

Techniques in plant culture and feeding developed in the last two years or so are making gardening an exciting adventure. Chemical agriculture, the growing of plants without soil, still is in an experimental stage, but the amateur with only a limited space can find pleasure in it. Another recent development is the use of vitamin B1, which fol- for a small plot. lowed upon the discovery a few years ago that plants, like human beings, manufacture a hormone secretion that speeds up growth.

Only since last fall has vitamin

B1 been on the market. There now seems to be no doubt of its nutritional value for many plants that do not themselves produce enough B1. Most flowers and shrubs are in this group. The economic plants-peas, corn, tomatoes, beans and other intensively cultivated crops - are not improved by it.

Experiments indicate the vitamin will aid delicate plants suffering from nutritional deficiencies. But its greatest promise is in the field of transplantation, repotting and propagation and in producing plants and blooms of extraordinary size.

Plants, even trees, have been dug up; the soil washed from their roots and a bath of B1 solution applied. They have thrived, whereas other plants transplanted in the same root-shocking man-ner, but without the bath, have died or were crippled.

The cost of the vitamin is well within the budget of most gardeners; $1 buys a season's supply 42 BWAY-PRONE KINGSTON 127-W

Use of B1 is so new that amateur gardeners may play an experimenter's role in the use of it. Undoubtedly they will discover advantages not yet noted by the experts.

Common Courtesy —In Letters Of Condolence

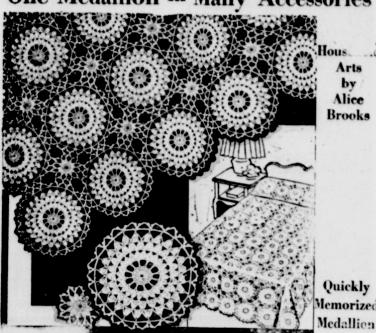

Many people find it difficult to write to friends who have had a death in the family. The occasion is so important, it's easy to forget how informal the letter must be-and how simple.

A letter of condolence, like a love letter, is ruled more by the heart than the head. A bereaved person cares little for fine language but does appreciate a sentence showing true feeling. If you express sincere admiration or love for the person lost, it will mean more than all the good grammar and quotations you could assemble. Don't eulogize extensively, don't go into details of illness or the manner of death. The one time when it may be well to mention the illness is where a person has been sick many yars. Then, you may want to tell your friend you've thought of them all these years, not just at the moment of the death of his loved one.

In the last analysis, the condolence letter is a handclasp. Take time to write it the minute you hear of the death. It is while your friend's eyes are blurred and his heart is full to breaking that he needs

This new and startling silhouette is Bruyere's answer to the wartime evening dress problem. She likes its shortened length for two reasons—its practicality in a city suffer-ing from blackouts, and its youthful cherm which she thinks is strong enough to bring it back. The lines of the frock are inspired by those of a Chinese pagoda. It's designed of black taffeta and its multiple tiers are bound in black-stitched ecru taffeta. Other short eveing dresses designed for dancing, are fash-ioned with wide, frothy white tulle skirts or are made of white taffeta printed with gigantic roses. Answer: Unless you and your brother have grown apart since his marriage, he-as the nominal head of the family—is the proper one to send out the announce-ments. Otherwise, if you prefer, it would be equally proper to let the sister with whom you live send them. The fact that your married sisters both have different names would only compli-

Herzog's Guidepost

W HEN one customer walks in and asks for a package of radish seed at 5 cents, the next one picks out a giant 8 cubic foot Frigidaire at $169.50, another orders a Red Devil electric fencer, and the next several buy. respectively, Moore's Shingle Stain, Rutland Roof Coating, an Odora wardrobe, poultry mesh, kitchen oilcloth, a frying pan, a flashlight, wallpaper - when customers find all these things and hundreds more under one roof, you've got a "general"

That's why we call Herzog's your modern "general" store. Not much different than the old-time general store - only bigger and better.

No general store is complete without a big bargain table.

You'll find a Big Bargain table in Herzog's Basement.

It's loaded with kitchen utensils and equipment all reduced at least 25 per cent; some articles are marked down to as much as one-third off!

The best part of it is, many are suitable for shower or Spring wedding gifts, such as the Pyrex tea pot with chro-mium trim, electric egg poacher, the genuine Drip-O-Lator, the Ingersoll Weather-larm clock, the Hull Pottery, etc.

Just as timely and welcome are those things you need for the summer cabin—egg poachers, food choppers, coffee-mak-ers, frying pans, water pails, brooms, mops, wall-type canopeners, etc.
A section of the basement is devoted to the items in this kitchen wares sale — did you check them in our ad in last night's paper? They won't last long!

Not at their reduced prices. They have been cut to sell immediately and make room for summer stock.

We've some good buys in the store not on the bargain table because they sell at year-round extremely low prices. One of them which deserves to be called a big bargain any day is Moore's Blind and Trellis Green. We sell it about 20 per cent cheaper than any similar product sells for elsewhere. Considering this low price and the fact that its several shades of green are marvelously satisfactory and on-fading, we consider it one the best buys in the store.

One of the interesting things about a general store is that you can always nose around and dig up something new and "unex-

"Twinkle-Twinks," for instance. Ann Herzog just got them for the Decorating Department and the first order sold out on sight.

They are quite a sight. Twin-kle Twinks are sets of paper stars, moons, comets, etc., treatwith harmless luminous paint. They are gummed, so you simply stick them on the ceff-ings, or walls of bedrooms, nurseries, whoopee rooms, etc.

They need to be exposed to the bright light only a few minutes, then when the light is turned out they glow like real stars. These inexpensive little sets are popular with mothers whose children fear the dark. When Twinkle-Twinks are in the room children beg to have the lights turned out!

Not in many years have we had such a run on stencils as this Spring. Folks are using them to decorate furniture and walls, to make kitchen borders, etc.

Flower decals have been equally popular. Women take an old, odd piece of furniture, give it a coat of Utilac, then decorate it with flower decals, or an oldfashioned stencil design - and they've a handsome extra piece that won't spoil their furniture sets. In fact, an old painted piece used among the other fur-niture provides interesting con-

The gay flower decals are being widely used on porch furni-ture — after the furniture has its coat of Utilac or Impervo

The other day a couple came in to get one of the oaken buckets we advertised recently. They didn't want it for an old-fash-ioned open well! They wanted it to use decoratively on the porch as a plant-holder!

You never know what they'll do next with the things they get at the "general" store.

Here's a quick recipe for the day you come to snap-up bargains from our Bargain Basement table:

Slice hard boiled eggs in a but-tered baking dish, cover thickly with grated cheese. Pour white sauce over them, add a little melted butter and bake at 400 degrees for 15 minutes. HEROG'S.

Andy Varapapa Is Coming To Recs to Teach Bowling long time-Andy Varipapa, world's been booked by the Central Recreation alleys for a two-day period of instructions and exhibitions on Thursday, April 18, and Saturday,

All seats will be reserved for the exhibitions and reservations can be made now at the Central Recs. The instruction periods in the afternoon will be free.

Equally as famous as his illustrious rival, Joe Falcaro, the barrel-chested Varipapa is regarded by experts as the greatest showman in the game.

Varipapa has earned nation-wide recognition for his inimitable skill in performing difficult trick shots with the mineralite. He is a remarkable instructor and has just completed a long tour of the Pacific coast, southwest and mid-

Varipapa gained nation-wide publicity some time ago when he was featured in the M.-G.-M short "Strikes and Spares," in which he knocked off some of the most difficult shots ever attempted on a Blass 146 164 ... 310 bowling alley.

The New Yorker, however, is not merely a trick shot bowler.
He holds some of the most imposing records in the books and is renowned as a money shooter, having defeated Nelson Burton, of Dallas, Tex., and Ray Schultz, of Buffalo, in $2,000 matches.

Possessed of a sturdy build and a ball with plenty of dynamite, Varipapa makes an imposing figure. He will compete against several local aces both nights of the exhibitions.

Detroit, April 13 (A)-Enthusiastic fans believe that the first 3,000 series of the current Amer- Cecelia 108 166 154 ican Bowling Congress tournament is due tonight, if ever. Potent threats are scheduled in the Chicago Monarchs who hit 3008 last year and the Bowes Seal Fast of Indianapolis.

Ad Carlson's Chicago Joseph Gills tried last night as did defending all-events Champion Joe Wilman's Budweisers. The Bills team hit 2912 for ninth place among the leaders with Wallie Freitag at 616 and William Hargadon at 608. Wilman stopped at 581 and his team from Chicago's suburban Cicero hit 2859, just 181 pins below their 1939 mark of 3040.

Maxie Stein, holder of the ABC all-time all-events high of 2070, gave his Burbank, Cal., Warner Brothers team only 558 in the five-man appearance but came back with 745 in the doubles. Modest support of 520 by Carl Stoer-kel held the duo to 1265. In the singles Maxie got 598. His total of 1901 was good for a fifth place tie with Charles Neeb of Columbus, O., in the all-events.
